Elaine Fabbro, MLIS, MA, is the Director, Library & Scholarly Resources, at Athabasca University Library. She is the co-author of Exploring the digital library: A guide for online teaching and learning, and several chapters on the role of libraries in distance education institutions and has presented at a number of conferences on various aspects of library services for distance learners. Her professional career has focused on the provision of reference and instructional services to a diverse range of library patrons, and in her current role, she is responsible for the Library, Copyright Office, and Archives and Records Management.